

CHAUTAUQUA

August 17 to 25

Speakers who are Orators
Music That Is Music
Entertainers Who CAN Entertain

That, in a nut-shell, describes what the 1912 Chautauqua will be. There absolutely could not be a better program than that secured for the full coming assembly. The speakers and entertainers represent the cream of the year's Chautauqua attractions. Plan now not to miss a single session.

OBITUARY

WINFIELD S. JONES.

Winfield Scott Jones was born in Camden, Maine, September 14, 1861 and died at his home in South Bend, Indiana, July 12, 1912. When but three years of age he came with his parents to Michigan and this state was his home until he reached manhood. He was a graduate of the schools here, having been a member of the class of '81. The next year after his graduation he entered the University of Michigan. He was an unusual Latin scholar and a fine student and was admitted to the University unconditioned—a rare thing. He had acquired the foundation upon which to build a splendid education. He was handicapped by ill health and on this account was prevented from finishing a literary course in Ann Arbor. He afterwards took a stenographic course in Chicago and was employed for several years in a clerical position. Later he lived in Buchanan, where he was a jeweler and about seven years ago he established a jewelry business in South Bend, Ind., where his death occurred.

Mr. Jones has had a struggle for life for a number of years, and one less cheerful and brave would have lost long ago. A weak heart has necessitated enduring, serious operations without the aid and comfort afforded by anaesthetics and he was strong enough and had sufficient will power to pull through once more—but the last attack he was unable to meet and the end came.

He leaves his wife, Ella Stevens Jones, whom he married in 1893, his mother, Mrs. Delia Jones of Paw Paw, and one brother, Ralph Jones of Chicago.

Short funeral services were held at the home in South Bend, and then he was brought to his mother's home where his friends gathered last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Marshall officiated at the services and spoke feelingly of the loss of not being able to understand why, when a person's life on account of lack of years seems incomplete—with so much undone—should be called for. He then compared it with the rough, unhealed stone that seems unprepared for fitting any particular niche in the construction of an immense building; the architect has it swung into place and the thing is complete and beautiful.

Winfield Jones has found the place prepared for him.

Snowstorms in July.

Early in July there occurred snowstorms in certain very warm regions, notably about Mount Etna, which at this time begins to scatter the accumulation of snow which that volcano has conserved during the winter. The crater of Etna is 3,279 meters in height, and during the winter months the snow packs into the crevices of the mountain, to be driven out by the summer winds.
